Are you a hot retail talent with bags of energy and the belief that you can drive sales success through building relationships in your area? Are you itching to go from in-store to out there – in the field, where it all happens? Fancy your own territory to grow and develop as you see fit – your patch, your ideas, your delivery? Add the opportunity to influence and grow a customer base your way, and a role where no two days are the same.

British American Tobacco is one of the leading suppliers of tobacco based products in the world, but has succeeded in retaining a local business feel. These field based marketing roles offer huge scope to develop local business through the delivery of a highly personalised one-to-one service where your judgement will often prove the deciding factor. You'll manage your time and have the freedom to do things your own way – supported by the full resources of a global blue chip organisation. Sound up your street? Let's get you out there.
