When you find out the name of this global innovator and dominant brand leader in the impulse products category, we're certain you'll want to meet them too.

But given their big name status, they're not looking for just anyone. You'll need to be a graduate with a CV that demonstrates a history of success in business development within the impulse sector. You will be a seasoned negotiator with creative flair with experience in volume, revenue and profit delivery. A classically trained Blue-Chip sales professional you will have 2-3 years' National Account Manager experience within the FMCG industry. You'll need to prove your ambition too. This company's success is based on the skills and drive of its people, and they're looking for someone who'll make an impact on day one, and continue to innovate every day thereafter.

As with every relationship, for it to succeed there needs to be give and take. You give us what we're looking for and you'll be able to take your share of a whole raft of rewards and benefits. These include the chance to work from home, substantial freedom to influence the sales function, and access to truly exceptional training and development, courtesy of our Sales and Marketing Colleges of Excellence.
